

Citizenship means...

English

TEAM 1:

Be active, be involved.

Radical actions. Don't hesitate to take back what belongs to you.

Supporting people that share your ideas (political prisoners, activists)

The freedom to ask questions or to keep silent.

Acting responsibly toward the world and its inhabitants.

TEAM 2:

- We do not believe in citizenship.
- It is simply a label, a piece of paper indicating your place of birth, your address and the place of birth of your parents.

TEAM 3:

Citizenship is being loyal to your country. It allows you to have choice, since you can vote for someone who can represent you and take the decisions in your name. This means that we have to respect our laws and our culture. It means that we have to represent our country overseas. We have to show respect to others, our country fellowmen, but also to citizens of other countries. To be a good citizen is to denounce injustices of a country towards another. You have to participate in a variety of activities in your community. We also have duties in our own country such as, paying our taxes. A good citizen today is much different than before. Today, we would refuse to go to war for our country. It's better to be a good citizen. Finally, a good citizen respects the world and we are all citizens of the world.

TEAM 4:

Citizenship is belonging to a family, a city, a village, or a country where values, languages and cultures meet. Citizenship has become an important asset in the democratic system of a country.
