

Recommendations that answer the question: “What needs to be the rules of the game for a globalized world?”

English

Team 2

- Commission a report to study the real impacts of globalization on the world
- Stop mindless and harmful consumption
- Change the political system
- Create progressive programs of work-study to gradually eliminate child labour

Team 3

Globalization only creates money for large corporations. If we need laws for countries to be able to enforce actions, because the power is given to the corporations and taken away from the countries. We could create an international committee to impose fines on those who do not follow strict human right laws and don't pay taxes that are in relation to the money made by the company. Taxes would be paid to the country for specific community improvements. Companies should pay for the schooling of their employees. If not, the indigenous communities are broken up, because they are sent to the city to work lose their culture. If we eliminate middle class, it will create jobs but the also unwanted social views, unwanted mentalities and unwanted culture (American)

Team 4

- For the good of actual and future societies, governments and companies or other organisations should be transparent in order for society to know about their actions, because in a democratic country, it's unacceptable that the government hide elements or act without the consent of the population.
- Each government should aim to improve health, education and to fight poverty. Reducing the debt is not a priority when a people's way of life is affected.
- It's very important that each individual have the opportunity to get a free education, since it's the only way to learn that we know almost nothing.
- Different governments of the Americas have to make sure that each country has a minimum wage for its workers and that it is adequate, so we can eradicate all forms of exploitation, including the exploitation of children, women and immigrants.
- Each country needs to have laws on working conditions (health, a maximum of 12 hours of work a day, 5 days a week, etc.) pre-established and respected by companies.
- Each country needs to have strict environmental laws to ensure the preservation of the environment and guarantees a better quality of life for today's and futures populations. In order to be fair, governments of the Americas should establish a minimum rate of taxes for all companies.
- Governments should impose a 0.1% tax on all stock transactions, to raise money for helping the development of populations.(free education, free health system, reconstruction, etc.)

Team 5

In a globalized world, countries should benefit equally. They should progress gradually and allow for positive change. Education should be developed so that the corporations and governments of developed countries cannot exploit developing countries. In this process of globalization, the human rights of individuals must be respected, but also as individuals in a cultural group, individuals in a country and individuals in the world.

We believe that power should be held at a national autonomous level (by the government of a country) but we also believe in the United Nations as a governing body. The UN must, however, have more power such as the control over transnational corporations, so that they are forced to respect human rights. The UN must also be made democratic since currently countries are not all equally represented.

Team 6

Child Labour

Children should not be exploited for their skills or abilities and should be educated in order to break the vicious cycle of exploitation.

Environment

We should use mother nature's resources intelligently and not be tempted to abuse or destroy the natural environment. We can achieve this through sustainable development and education.

Team 7

In order to have a successful and prosperous globalized world there needs to be an international organization that everybody belongs to that sets standards and guidelines for all countries in a democratic manner. These guidelines should transcend borders and include issues such as pollution reduction, waste management and protection of the environment. The government should also take a bigger role in encouraging projects that benefit the environment and should create job opportunities (eco-tourism) and recycling projects. Some of these guidelines should be aimed at raising working standards especially in the poorer, disadvantaged countries. For instance, there should be minimum wages and unions established to prevent worker exploitation. Finally, major decisions should take into consideration the effects on all countries.

Team 8

Globalization is not a game!

The "game" will not be fun unless the people make the rules.

People must realize that they do have a voice. They should be compelled to become empowered.

Team 10

Governments must prioritize people ahead of money to ensure that human rights are respected.

Team 11

The ideal globalised world:

Everyone has access to the basic needs of life such as food, clean water, health care and shelter etc., and is free to practice his/her own culture and beliefs.

Our rules for Globalization:

A guaranteed living wage for all workers, and unions are not repressed.

Access for all to health care, social services and all levels of education.

Agreements mutually agreed by both companies and the community that their operations affect. Outside independent monitoring of conditions to ensure that guidelines and agreements are enforced.

Team 12

- Do not abuse the power that you have and violate human rights. Improve the entire system citizens, companies, the government. We need to find a way for the people in various countries to be secure with in their country and with their government. With corrupt governments the people become insecure and there is a vicious cycle of inflation and poverty and then the entire society suffers.
- The government needs to make the people their priority first.
- Many of the governments hide behind a mask and do not inform their citizens.
- It is ironic...How can we establish limitations and rules when the idea of globalization is to remove the barriers.

Two recommendations:

- We need education
- Abolish the world's national debt and to instead use the money to educate the people.

Team 13

All governments have to have similar goals and operating strategies. They must listen to the will of the people and make changes based on their recommendations. The needs of the people must be met regardless of the opinions of outside countries and influences. The sovereignty and will of the country needs to be first and foremost. In order for the countries to be integrated into globalization they must define their own model of participation and how they wish to implement an international agenda.

Human rights - The UN Declaration of Human Rights needs to be enforced and upheld around the world. The biggest problem with globalization is the exploitation of other people and cultures. With the enforcement of the declaration we will hopefully put an end to these crimes against humanity.

Team 14

We need freedom of information: people making decisions should have open door meetings so the people who are directly affected by the decisions know about them, and have a say.

Decision makers should take the environment into account. We have to realize that what we are doing is going to affect us in the future. We need to educate people so when they become shareholders they are able to pressures on a company.

Governments should put pressure on companies by giving huge fines when companies broke the rules. We choose the government and they should have the power to make those kinds of decisions.

Team 15

“What needs to be the rules of the game for a globalized world?”

- Equal representation ( not necessarily by population) E.G. united nations.
- Proper funds according to needs.
- Set rules and regulations for companies that go into other countries and they need to be reinforced.
- Listen to the Super Powers ( United states, Canada, and Japan) with caution.
- There ought to be a quota on how many companies can enter the country.
- Reduce poverty levels
- Better working conditions
- Higher wages , wages that will be good in order to survive.
- Lower interest
- Trying to reduce the levels of corruption
- Higher taxes for non domestic companies

Team 16

There are no rules. I don't want to play the game. I am going to lose the game anyways. It's not a game, there are no rules to set. It's a "lose-lose game".

Team 17

To live in a globalized world, is to live in a world that is very small, ver competitive but one that has lost its unique cultures and languages. People are exploiting developing countries just so that we can get products for cheaper. Small companies lose while large companies gain.

Globalization is not the solution to the problems in the 21st century although, monopolies can be both positive and negative. It is necessary to protect the rights of people over the rights of companies. Small companies do not have the technology necessary to enter the market dominated by multinational companies.

Team 18

"My opinion is that since everybody is stupid regarding humanity, we should find a solution, other than eradicating humanity, in order to save our beautiful planet. According to me, the solution would be to have a fair and reasonable globalization. It has to be a socialist system to prevent abuse of power and the ambition of certain people, that we won't name in order not to shock anyone in the forum. These ***** , who love money and power way to much are presently globalizing the earth under the cover of democracy hypocrisy in countries such as the USA and Canada, etc. Those countries, where everybody is supposedly happy, free... We have to fight against this system, with the help of syndicates, education, protests, and even weapons if necessary. People of the world, we should forget multicultural or religious differences. Resist to capitalism and exploitation of lower classes Go! Go! Go!"
